ABOUT THE PRESENTERS

NOAH D. FIEDLER is a partner with Hinshaw & Culbertson, LLP. Since 1995, he has used his experience as the chief executive officer of a trade association and as an elected official to assist corporations and public entities avoid litigation and prevail in complex disputes. Mr. Fiedler counsels clients on risk management and resolving commercial disputes through negotiation, mediation or, if necessary, litigation. In addition, he defends professionals accused of negligence. Mr. Fiedler is an experienced trial lawyer, having led or second-chaired more than 15 trials. He has helped large corporations and public entities, such as cities and school districts achieve their business and organizational goals. Mr. Fiedler has extensive experience as an appointed and elected official in the state of Wisconsin. In 2012, 2013, and 2014 he received M Magazine's Top Milwaukee-Area Litigator. He is a member of the State Bar of Wisconsin (Litigation Section) and the Association of Professional Responsibility Lawyers. Mr. Fiedler earned his B.S. degree from the Ambassador University and his J.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin Law School.

ALYSSA A. JOHNSON is an associate at Hinshaw & Culbertson, LLP, in the Milwaukee office. Ms. Johnson focuses her practice in professional liability defense litigation. She also has substantial experience with litigation involving the real estate, property, workers' compensation, health and disability insurance and ERISA subrogation claims, as well as the defense of consumer financial issues. Ms. Johnson has successfully handled trials and appeals on behalf of clients. She earned her B.A. degree in political science from University of Wisconsin-Whitewater and her J.D. degree from Marquette University Law School.
